WHY IS THIS A GOOD EXAMPLE?

This park offers different kinds of conviviality and experiences due to the generosity of its spaces and the range of various purposes it can be used for. The Grand Park of the Docks show how natural systems, like water cleaning and storage, and environments can be combined with an active urban park, with the aim of becoming the central point within the emerging neighbourhood, and an attractive destination in the minds of its inhabitants.

DESCRIPTION

Saint Ouen Park is a large 100 hectare area located at the edge of the green neighborhood of the Docks of the historical centre of St Ouen at the gates of Paris. The park represents the transformation of an almost mono functional, industrial territory into a newly developed, fully integrated area. The park includes diverse structures and services such as an educational greenhouse, a large skate park and three playgrounds, providing an environment where people of various backgrounds and social status meet and interact. The park has many outdoor spaces and equipment such as air sliders for rollerblading or skateboard, amphitheatres for concerts and playgrounds for kids.
